PRESENTS

Helping Students with Autism Spectrum Disorder Succeed in the Classroom

with

Dr. William L. Heward, Ed. D, BCBA-D

Professor Emeritus, College of Education and Human Ecology
The Ohio State University

Educating children with disabilities is a team game. The goals: improved quality of life now and maximal independence in the future. The clock is running and all involved—school, teachers, family members, and especially the child—have limited resources to contribute. The most pragmatic and ethical way forward requires targeting only those learning outcomes most likely to yield optimal benefit to the child. This presentation will explore the meaning of meaningful behaviour change and suggest actions behaviour analysts, educators, and parents can take to ensure their hard work translates into higher quality of life for the children they serve. The rationale, research base, and implementation guidelines for interventions that help students with ASD and other disabilities learn five skill sets needed to succeed in inclusive classrooms will be presented.
